PENSION FUND FOR ACTORS.

Heinrich Conried's Idea of the Tax on Complimentary Tickets.

New Play with an Old Title—Other Stage News.

The idea of the ten-cent tax on complimentary theatre tickets originated with Heinrich Conried, and not with A. M. Palmer. Mr. Palmer has written a very frank and very charming letter to Mr. Conried, declaring that he has absolutely no intention of trying to steal his thunder. Mr. Palmer tried to avoid talking on the subject at all, he said, but was forced to do so because the matter leaked out. He invited Mr. Conried to attend a meeting of managers where the matter would be discussed, and get all due glory for his project.

"My idea," said Mr. Conried yesterday, "is not to make this tax for the benefit of the Actors' Fund. The money, in my mind, should go to a pension fund for disabled or superannuated actors. This would practically do away with the horrible benefit system, which has become so fearfully exaggerated that it has become a curse to the theatre. It is a pity that the money is not used for the benefit of the actors themselves. I have worked long and thoughtfully on this idea, which apparently has nothing against it and everything for it."

"All for Love" is the exhilarating title of a play by Seymour Hicks, the actor who made such a hit there with the "Kendals." The young man has been reminded that this title was first appropriated about two hundred years ago by Shylock in a play founded on Shakespeare's "Antony and Cleopatra." It is a comedy as though Noah might have used it at private theatricals in the ark.

John Stetson is happy at last, for his "Crust of Society" will be placed at the Broadway Theatre after next week. What is fun for him is anything but fun for Gillette, whose "Ninety Days" moves out of town. The fate of this play is a play founded on Shakespeare's "Antony and Cleopatra." It is a comedy as though Noah might have used it at private theatricals in the ark.

H. R. Conway, the curious actor who was seen with Mrs. Bernard Beere, appears to have been meeting in London with the same melancholy experiences he had here. He is cast in a play called "Faint," said to be a very ghastly affair—at Terry's Theatre. And had to play the part of a man who was supposed to have lost his memory. A London theatrical that he had to trust very often to the prompter for his words.

R. A. Roberts, talking of the paragraph in yesterday's "Evening World" on the subject of Howard's play, "Aristocracy," said that he had been suggested by a drama sent to him by a friend, and that he had received a play called "Comes and Coronets." He liked the title very much, but thought the piece very bad. He could not be impressed upon his mind about the loss of his memory. A London theatrical that he had to trust very often to the prompter for his words.

Henry E. Dixey and E. E. Rice appeared upon the stage of the Columbia Theatre, Boston, the other night, as spectators in the show hands in the centre of the stage. Dixey facetiously introduced Rice to the audience and Rice made a speech. This must have been a very interesting episode for Boston.

Barré, who wrote for S. Willard the charming comedy called "The Professor's Love Story," has just had a play accepted by Henry Irving, entitled "A Straggler of '15."

Says Teddy Marks: "No play that does not appeal to women can fill the managerial coffers. If once you get crowded malice, rest assured that you have a big success. Plays that you think are going to capture the male element are no good. Women must be interested before a theatre will be filled. Those stars who are looked upon as women's favorites are the ones that make the money all the time." This is a fact that may be advantageously remembered by aspiring playwrights.

John A. Stevens, who was in such despair when he discovered the human bridge incident in "The Span of Life," has gone ahead, nevertheless, and finished his melodrama called "Darkest New York," which contains a somewhat similar incident. The human bridge, as before mentioned in these columns, occurs in a fire scene. "Darkest New York" is in six acts, taking place in the Mohawk Valley, Union Square, St. Vincent's Hospital, a roadside inn, a tenement-house and a coal mine. Mr. Stevens expects that the piece will be produced in Philadelphia next month. "I tried to get away from melodrama," he said yesterday, "and wrote one or two pretty plays. I've had enough of them. I don't want to starve to death."

RAILROADS AND RAILROAD MEN.

News and Gossip of Interest in Transportation Circles.

William C. Bullitt, formerly assistant to President Kimball, of the Norfolk and Western, has been appointed Vice-President of that company, in charge of traffic, as the successor of Charles G. Eddy.

The Chicago and Northwestern is said to be trying to reduce the time of its popular Northwestern Limited, between Chicago and St. Paul, a distance of 400 miles, from thirteen to ten hours.

Much interest attaches to the meeting of the stockholders of the Old Dominion Company in this city to-morrow evening for the election of a successor to the late President John M. Robinson.

H. S. Burges, formerly Assistant General Freight Agent of the Erie, has been transferred to the Erie Dispatch.

The joint meeting of the passenger agents of the Trunk Lines and Central Traffic Association, now in progress in Chicago, will undoubtedly pass through at least the formality of agreeing to maintain World's Fair rates.

The officials of the Atlantic Coast line are arranging to reduce the time between this city and Jacksonville from twenty-eight to twenty-four hours. The distance is 104 miles, and the necessity of bringing about this feasible reduction has been demonstrated by travel South.

Washington will be allotted, with twenty-five minutes for a meal, and the remaining 78 minutes will be covered without passing through Richmond, Charleston or Savannah.

SPORTING NEWS AND NOTES.

Harmonious Baseball Convention Ended Last Night.

1,400 Members of the M. A. C. to Be Sued for $25 Each.

To-day the gentlemen who rule the destinies of baseball are resting on their oars, and the meeting of the National League just brought to a close goes on record as one of the most harmonious gatherings it has ever held. The rules that have been adopted are as follows: The pitcher has been put back five feet, no fast ball will be allowed, any motion to deprive a base-runner will be called a balk, and a sacrifice hit will not be counted a time at bat against a player. It was also decided to confine sacrifice hits to plays made by infielders in their own territory. Nothing has yet been decided as to the signing of Connor and Kelly by the New Yorks, but the latter have not relinquished their efforts to obtain Roger and the redoubtable Michael J. If the Philadelphia management doesn't stand out for too much in return for Roger's release he may be secured for this city, otherwise Victor will be the protector of the first corner. The schedule for the season was adopted without delay, and this is the layout for the work of New York and Brooklyn:

New York at Home—With Boston, April 27, 28, 29, 30, May 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, May 31, June 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7,
